Each year, an estimated 3.3 million children are exposed to violence against their mothers or female caretakers by family members.

In homes where domestic violence occurs, fear, instability, and confusion replace the love, comfort, and nurturing that children need. These children live in constant fear of physical harm from the person who is supposed to care for and protect them. They may feel guilty at loving the abuser or blame themselves for causing the violence.

(Domestic Violence, Understanding a Community Problem, National Woman Abuse Prevention Fund)

Studies find child witnesses to exhibit more aggressive and antisocial, as well as, fearful and inhibited behaviors, and to have lower social competence.

Children who witness violence were also found to show more anxiety, aggression, depression, and temperament problems, less empathy and self-esteem, and lower verbal, cognitive, and motor abilities than children who did not witness violence at home. There is also some support for the hypothesis that children from violent families of origin carry violent and violence-tolerant roles to their adult intimate relationships.

Forty to sixty percent (40-60%) of men who abuse women also abuse children.

Children in homes where domestic violence occurs are physically abused or seriously neglected at a rate 1,500% higher than the national average in the general population.

(National Woman Abuse Prevention Project, Washington, D.C.)
Boys who witness family violence are more likely to batter their female partners as adults than are boys raised in non-violent homes.

Girls who witness their mother’s abuse have a higher rate of being battered as adults.

In one study, 27% of domestic homicide victims were children.

(Florida Governor’s Task Force on Domestic and Sexual Violence, Florida Mortality Review Project, 1997, p. 45, table 11).

When children are killed during a domestic dispute, 90% are under age 10, 56% are under age 2.

(Florida Governor’s Task Force on Domestic and Sexual Violence, Florida Mortality Review Project, 1997, p. 51, table 28).

The 14 member programs of the New Hampshire Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence assist survivors of sexual assault and domestic violence, and members of their families, with 24-hour crisis lines, emergency shelter, counseling, support groups, and help dealing with police, medical and court personnel. In 2003, Coalition member agencies assisted 7,664 battered women, 417 men, and provided shelter to 645 women and children, and four men.
